A Gateway to Global Action!

Shades and Colors of Bilingualism

The color blue is often associated with a sense of sorrow, melancholy, and aloofness; whereas the color yellow evokes warmth, affection, and wealth.

Unlike the unattainable task of combining oil and water together, blending blue and yellow does bring about a completely different color.

Green, the resulting color, has its own characteristics and it is associated with entirely different features from those of its originating elements such as prosperity, life, hope, and freshness.

Bilingualism holds close resemblance with color blending:

It represents shades of endless tones and qualities, each one containing its own unique characteristics.
